

FISHERMEN'S VOICE

Vol. 16, No. 3 - March 2011

News & Comments for and by the Fishermen of Maine

FREE

Ted Hoskins, Fisherman's Advocate Maine and Belize

by Tom Seymour

Ted Hoskins lives in Blue Hill, Maine, during the winter but for approximately the past 40 years, has spent his summers on Isle Au Haut. There he serves as minister at the island's

"I always felt the fishing industry was important," —Hoskins

Congregational church. Hoskins began his ministry in South Glastonbury, Connecticut, a place still dear to his heart. Since coming to Maine, he has developed an intimate, working knowledge of coastal Maine and its people, particularly

See TED HOSKINS on page 6

Photo by Tim Seymour

Ted Hoskins at home in Blue Hill. Hoskins has been an advocate for fishermen for decades. He is seen everywhere and anywhere Maine fishermen's concerns are on the table. He was recently doing the same for fishermen in Belize.